Putting your home on the market is no easy task.

You will have a lot of questions:

- What price will maximize my profit?
- How do I market my home to the widest audience?
- Should I accept the first offer?
- Is staging important?
- Should I make repairs or lower the price?
- Will remodeling pay off when I sell?

Your Texas REALTOR® can help you sort through all these considerations.

costly errors.

“Not accepting a good offer because it came ‘too quickly.’ They waited three months and got less than the first offer.”

“Spending too much money on upgrades and not getting a return on that amount when they sold.”

“Telling the buyer they would fix whatever was listed on the inspection report, thinking there wouldn’t be much.”

“The seller lied on the disclosure notice. That led to a lawsuit after closing!”

“Not remedying pet smells or cigarette smells. Buyers cannot get over it.”

“Over-improving for the area.”

“Doing a bathroom remodel themselves. Everything but the toilet had to be removed and redone.”

“Selling for the amount of an online valuation and never realizing they lost a lot of money.”

“Repainting with pale pink because it matched their furniture. That cost them almost a year on the market and $40,000 off the asking price.”

“The sellers didn’t disclose previous flooding. The neighbors told the new owners about it. Awful mess!”

“Not taking an offer that came in the first couple of days. We never got another offer.”
